

BBC calls on ramsac for its views

DAN MAY of Surrey-based IT solutions consultancy ramsac was recently called on by the BBC for comments on the government's announcement that the right to request flexible working is to be extended to parents of children up to the age of 16.

He was invited by the producer of BBC Breakfast to appear live on the sofa alongside Bill Turnbull and Sian Williams to discuss the implications of the issue for businesses, and also featured in a live interview with 5 Live's Breakfast Show presenter Nicky Campbell.

During his interviews with the BBC, Dan said: "Flexible working and parental leave are excellent endeavours; however, it is important that we maintain the interests of the employer as well. At ramsac we do everything we possibly can to ensure we support the family commitments of our employees and that we manage a healthy work-life balance.

However, a business can only be a good employer if they are also a profitable business – a company that employs specialist staff often finds it very hard to plug the gaps left by flexible working."
